

I take telemarketers calls to my home and my business very seriously. I view it as an invasion of privacy. The attack on our right to privacy has the consumer running for cover. Why if this is a free country do we, the consumer, have to endure endless phone calls from unwanted telemarketers. I get an average of 10 calls a day from telemarketers and others looking to gain research on working telephone numbers or other private information. I believe the FCC should protect consumers rights, not telemarketers. The FCC should not contest the State of New Jersey "DO Not Call List". I want the FCC to regulate telemarketers, establishing rules and regulations for ethical telemarketing with a mechanism to enforce. Telemarketing is an area which leaves every consumer open to fraud.
